

Tower Walk

Follow in the steps of Royalty and Clackmannan’s rich Industrial Heritage. This walk takes you past Clackmannan Tower to a wonderful viewpoint overlooking areas rich in past and present industry, with options to follow old waggonways and woodland trails.

Long, moderate slopes. Some steps, gates and possibility of livestock in fields. Uneven grassy paths, with narrow sections, and rough gravel tracks. Muddy when wet.

4 miles/
6.5 km
Allow 2½ hours

Town Walk

An easy circular walk taking in Main Street with its Tollbooth and rich social history. The walk continues exploring locations where churches, schools, a distillery, a mill and a pottery once stood, each contributing to Clackmannan’s importance.

Long, gentle slopes. Generally smooth, some sections loose and uneven. Public road crossings.

1 mile/
1.6 km
Allow 1 hour

Linn Mill Walk

Explore bluebell and conifer woods, river banks, old rail lines, sites rich in industrial archaeology and history. This route with short or extended options takes in wonderful views of the Ochil Hills and Clackmannan’s skyline.

Moderate slopes. Loose gravel and grassy paths, muddy when wet. Steep steps, boardwalks and wooden bridges without handrails, kissing gate and public road crossings.

4½ miles/
7.3 km

Clackmannan: Scottish Gaelic Clach Mhainn, meaning “Stone of Mannan”

Formed by glaciers, once an island, Clackmannan is steeped in history, with Royal connections and industrial innovation.

King’s Seat Hill has magnificent views and a tower of golden stone. This 14th century tower was built by King David II of Scotland on the site of previous Royal residences. Robert the Bruce resided here and hunted in Forests surrounding Clackmannan. Here he lost a glove, calling out “Lookaboutye” and my glove: now the County Motto. The old market place has a Tolbooth built in 1592 to provide a court, prison and County administration. Alongside the Tolbooth are the Mercat Cross and the “Clack” or Stone of Mannan, named after the Celtic God Manau.

Plenty to discover, experience and explore.
